CubeGuard Launches Cubicle Message Barrier to Stop Interruptions and Reclaim Productive Time at Work

SANTA CLARA, CALIF. – June 8, 2009 – CubeGuard, Inc. introduced the CubeGuard Cubicle Message Barrier. This cool new communications tool lets you share your status with co-workers and improve productivity by warding off unwanted interruptions.

Based on U.S. Census Bureau data, CubeGuard estimates that there are more than 50 million cubicle workers in the U.S. today. These workers share one problem in common: there is no effective way to prevent interruptions while working on important tasks or to communicate where they are when not at their desk. CubeGuard helps solve this challenge by providing a retractable message banner that is easily mounted across a cubicle or office entryway.

"Workers lose a significant amount of time to unnecessary interruptions and the time it then takes to refocus on work after each interruption," said Jonathan B. Spira, Chief Analyst at Basex, a knowledge economy research firm, and author of Managing the Knowledge Workforce. "Such interruptions cost the U.S. economy hundreds of billions of dollars. Low-tech solutions such as barriers can play a role in reducing the extent of this problem."

CubeGuard is designed to fit into any professional office environment and comes in a variety of photo-quality print designs and messages. It fits cubicle openings of up to 50 inches wide, and installs in seconds. Users simply pull the message banner across their cubicle entryway when they need to prevent interruptions or to share their availability status. Changing your status is as easy as swapping out message cartridges.

"Need to get that report finished? Want to get home at a reasonable hour? You will be amazed at how effective this simple tool is in helping you reclaim some personal space," says John Stanton, CEO of CubeGuard.

Want to personalize CubeGuard? Individuals can pick from an assortment of background designs and create their very own messages to be custom printed. Companies that want to personalize CubeGuard for their staff, for product launches or as a branded marketing giveaway can get fully customized designs and messages.

Adam Wilson, one of CubeGuard's early beta testers, summed it up nicely: "I love my CubeGuard. It turns away all those time-hogs that lurk at your cube and suck your time away. I'm saved from them at least five or ten times every day. Can't work without one!"

Pricing & Availability
CubeGuard Complete comes with everything you need for installation and includes one message cartridge for a suggested retail price of $19.99. Custom messages are available for just $29.99.
